Way too peaceful

I took the dog for a walk on Sunday morning at Burswood and took this photo (there are two swans there). It's going to be so much nicer when I take an annual photo of cars racing, can't wait.

The doctor is right

Andrew Miller (Opinion, 11/8) nicely sums up a respected medical professional's view of the Cook Government's apparently casual approach to our health system's crisis. "We might all love racetracks, stadiums and train tracks for miles but none is as important as providing timely emergency care." Please reconsider your priorities, Premier.
