

Keep it in budget

It seems highly unlikely that the proposed Burswood racetrack will be cancelled, even though it is the most unpopular project I have ever seen in WA. Noting the incredible cost overruns in recent years on projects completed by the current Government, I would like to see the quoted figure of about $217 million for the racetrack actually adhered to.

I think the Government must be firmly held to the figure quoted, as would any private company. It won't surprise me, however, if the final amount is well over double the estimate. More fools us.

Best ignore the blow-in

As an avid reader and occasional contributor of the letters pages over many years, I long ago came to the conclusion that some contributors have an overinflated value of their opinion and also their knowledge, which in recent times have included many letters from some climate warriors in Victoria.

However, regardless of your views, this is a global topic, so I can live with that.

I do, however, have an issue with someone in Victoria telling us via the letters that the racetrack, which the overwhelming majority of Western Australians don't want, is a good idea (Letters, 3/3).

Was he a Dan Andrews voter as well?
