The 17-year-old was crossing a crowded street when a speeding car hit her, leaving her fighting for life in hospital.

A 17-year-old girl is fighting for life after being struck by a car at a car meet on Monday night.

The teen was trying to cross Camfield Drive in Burswood, WA, just before 10pm, which was lined by spectators, when she was hit by a black Honda Civic sedan.

She suffered multiple broken bones and was rushed to Royal Perth Hospital in a critical condition.

Mobile phone footage captured two cars speeding past spectators gathered outside the Crown complex.

Police said the incident occurred as a pre-arranged car meet was dispersing.

“We’ll be alleging excessive speed was involved, and other organisers have canceled similar meets or events later this week,” Police Commissioner Col Blanch said.

The meet was part of a regular event known as Mondaymeets, which draws large crowds of car enthusiasts each week.

Blanch said police were present earlier in the evening and had impounded a vehicle just before the crash.

“I think what we will do as a result is crank down even more and make sure that the behaviour of these organised car meets ... what we don’t support is reckless and dangerous behavior that results in these tragedies,” he said.

The 25-year-old male driver of the Honda was not injured and is assisting police with their investigation.
