

Labor not doing its share

I had a four-minute shower yesterday knowing my wastewater would go to the garden.

I waited for the sun to rise knowing my solar panels would supply me with hot water and add to my battery for later consumption . I recycled my rubbish, bottles cans, etc. to not contribute to the growing piles of waste which we need to manage each year.

My food scraps go to my chooks, my old used clothing goes to Good Sammy and I contribute regularly to various charities and volunteer at the same time. I walk if I can instead of using fuel in my car.

My question is, why am I doing this when the Cook Government wastes money on racetracks, ferries and offices for government? Because we all have to do it I suppose.

By the way, I wore pink yesterday for the McGrath Foundation breast cancer charity and because I was a mother on Mother's Day and proud to be a citizen of WA.
